

Human-Plant Relations in Latin America

Friday – October 18th, 2024

ULB Room S.15.215 (Building S, 15th floor)

10:00 – 10:30	Introduction to the Workshop
10:30 - 12:30	First Session: Human skin and tree bark entanglements: Kayapó practices of body-making – Taynã Tagliati (University of Bonn) Multispecies health in SAF-reforestation projects among the Caititu's Apurinã – Markus S. Enk (Free University of Brussels) The smell of spirits – Inin niwe, “Fragrant Ecologies” and the Politics of Olfaction in the Peruvian Amazon – Lisa Ausic (Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam)
12:30 – 13:30	Lunch
13:30 – 14:50	Second Session Care Narratives: Babassu Breakers and Mother Palm Trees - Adriana Ressiore Campodonio (Wageningen University) Human-maize respect in the Mixe milpas of Oaxaca – Gabriel G. Roman (Free University of Brussels / École des hautes études en sciences sociales)
14:50 – 15:10	Coffee Break
15:10 – 16:30	Third Session Being ‘rooted’ and being ‘native’: Mapuche relationships to land through plant metaphors - Santiago Irribarra Palet (University of Manchester) Are trees like maize? Work (meyaj) and human-plant co-agentivity among the Maya - Josemaría Becerril Aceves (École des hautes études en sciences sociales)
16:30 – 16:45	Coffee Break
16:45 – 17:45	Writing Exercise and Final Remarks